

Royal Rangers Defy the Rules

The proposed Royal Rangers Adventure Camp poses serious problems for the mountain area, a concern that has been festering for over eight years now. Save Our Forest Association is part of a coalition of community groups actively opposing this oversized project.

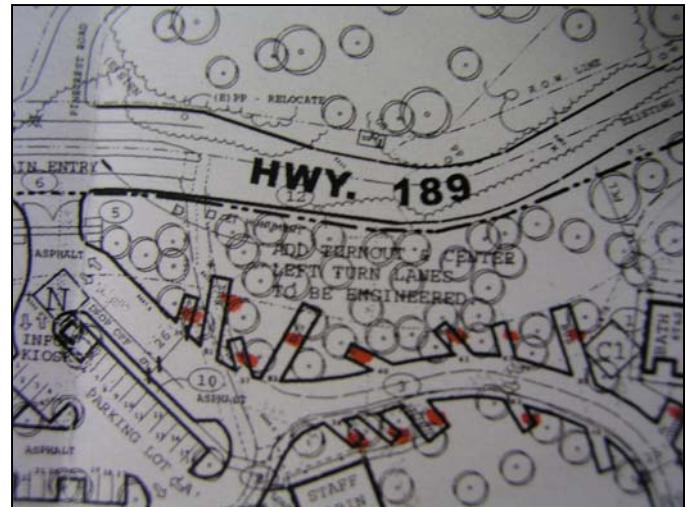

There are seven major reasons to reject the project:

1. It is not downsized as promised,
2. It does not comply with county guidelines,
3. It worsens fire hazard and evacuation danger,
4. It creates an unnecessary traffic signal on Highway 18,
5. It likely increases local taxes without benefiting the community,
6. The environmental report for the project is badly flawed and misleading,
7. There already are four established camps in the immediate area.

All these significant problems have been documented in a 50-page report about the adverse impacts to the community, compiled by SOFA and participating coalition groups. Copies will be sent to county government officials and made available to the public.

Time to Say “NO”

From the very start the Royal Rangers have behaved more like invaders than responsible members of the community. They want the county to capitulate to their excessive demands without being accountable for basic planning safeguards and public safety. They want the county to ignore the rights of local mountain residents.

Such a project would be a terrible precedent for the future of our mountain area and its unique quality of life.

The county has been bending over backwards to accommodate this project. In April 2006 the Royal Rangers were given 75 days by the Board of Supervisors to downsize the project to serve 350 occupants. Now three-and-a-half years later, the project is still large enough for 650 to 1000 campers.

The time has come to pull the plug. Please sign the neighborhood petitions against this project and the traffic signal. It also helps to write or e-mail Supervisors Neil Derry and Paul Biane stating your opposition. Their address is 385 N. Arrowhead Ave., 5th floor, San Bernardino, CA 92415-0110.

Eagle Ridge Estates Update

One year ago today I was reading a letter from Scott C. Ferguson, Chief, Enforcement and Special Projects Unit, Lahontan Regional Water Quality Control Board, about the Eagle Ridge project on Grass Valley Road in Lake Arrowhead. Developer Rob Roy had defaulted, causing First Centennial Bank to take over the loan. "Winterizing" the site became the first priority because of the unpaved roads, slopes and soil stockpiles all subject to erosion. Run-off across and under Grass Valley Road and into Grass Valley Creek could contaminate the creek and Grass Valley Lake with construction effluent and sediment. Luckily, we got more snow than rain last winter and the erosion control measures that First Centennial (and three other banks) bankrolled to the tune of $600,000 worked.

Fast-forward to today; the leaves are off the trees, and we have had two light rainstorms recently while the abandoned project's visual blight increases. The sand bags put in for erosion control are disintegrating and the fencing is giving way. Unfortunately for us all, it is not a Chamber of Commerce photo opportunity.

First Centennial Bank of Redlands is now out of the picture, having failed because it funded too many similarly risky loans. Three other banks are now sharing the note, but what is the property's current value in relation to the 11 million dollar default? And what is the County of San Bernardino doing about the abandoned state of the property? A County Planning official recently stated the project is "in limbo." With winter rapidly approaching, it is unclear whether last year's erosion control is satisfactory or not. SOFA has asked the Lahontan Board to physically inspect the site and enforce all required steps to stabilize it for the wet weather season ahead.

Acquisition of the site by a land trust, or a conservation-minded philanthropist or organization could preserve the site for public use and enjoyment and even return the site to its 1980's status as part of the San Bernardino National Forest.

FOREST CARE AND THE ARROWHEAD LAKE ASSOCIATION

Sometimes things happen in Lake Arrowhead that make one wonder what happened to common sense, good judgment and good will. This is certainly how some new homeowners feel after purchasing a house near the lake last summer.

During routine tree work near the house, it was determined that there were also many trees on the property that posed a fire hazard under the county hazardous fuel abatement ordinance. Since Forest Care is here to help with ordinance compliance, Forest Care was recommended to the homeowner, who quickly signed up with this extraordinary cost share program.

A Forest Care professional forester then visited the property and marked a total of 38 trees for removal, 19 of which were between the house and the lake. To this point, the owners seemed to be following common sense and were doing what is best to protect our precious forest environment and stay in compliance with the law. Unfortunately there was one unknown obstacle. This was the "Reserve Strip" to which the Arrowhead Lake Association (ALA) claims ownership, which in this case comes all the way up to the back of the house.

Forest Care, using an official county property boundary map that shows the property as an elongated rectangle, and the homeowners, faithfully believing their property would extend almost to the lake trail, made an understandable mistake in their assessment of the property lines. So Forest Care and the owners were guilty of "removing trees without ALA authorization from the reserve strip." This offense can carry a really serious fine, which in this case could have amounted to $275,000. The fact that these trees had been determined to be a fire hazard under county code and by Forest Care made no difference.

After well over two months of discussion, this conflict culminated in a special ALA hearing where the fine was reduced to $2,500 plus an additional $1,350 for an official ALA property survey. This despite the fact that ALA benefited significantly from the property owner's effort in removing the hazardous trees, because ALA is now in code compliance – at least on this small part of its "Reserve Strip".

What are the lessons learned from this unfortunate series of events? First, Forest Care should develop a strong memorandum of understanding with ALA, which should prevent such unnecessary confrontations. Secondly, ALA should become a team player with other organizations more knowledgeable in matters pertaining to trees and fire safety, and take advantage of these resources. And thirdly, for homeowners the lesson is simple. Do not take anything for granted, even when it comes from Forest Care. Forest Care's cost-sharing program can work wonderfully, but if property boundaries are not clearly defined, it can become very expensive, as this example shows.
